

Voces Novae fills sanctuary with joy at 2018 Adath Jeshurun Music Festival

BY LEE CHOTTINER, COMMUNITY EDITOR

March 22, 2018 (<https://jewishlouisville.org/voces-novae-fills-sanctuary-with-joy-at-2018-adath-jeshurun-music-festival/>)

One by one, black-clad singers of the Voces Novae choral group walked into the sanctuary, took their places on the pulpit, stood silent for a moment or two, then, at the conductor's urging, grew their voices into a stirring Renaissance-Baroque chant of Psalm 100 – in Hebrew.

(<http://jewishlouisville.org/wp-content/uploads/2018/03/Music-Festival-2.jpg>)

Jennifer Diamond and Cantor David Lipp perform together during the 2018 Adath Jeshurun Music Festival. This year's festival celebrated the 25th anniversary of Louisville's Voces Novae choral group. (Community photo by William Beasley)

Not the kind of music one normally hears in a synagogue. But this piece was composed by Salomone Rossi (1570-1628), a Jewish Renaissance-era composer who wrote for Christians and